

Howling

by Aron Ryan

walking into prowling, we're pursuing
this eclipse – its bloody glow on our bloody
hands on a bloodier
land, where

we paint ourselves
wolves – fingers
into claws, teeth into daggers, speaking
into snarling, growling, howling so long

we deafen
our hearts – bleating suspiciously like sheep.